By Laura Sims
We just ordered this book after finding out we were moving back to Germany; actually to the town this family was stationed near. As a family with 3 kids from 2nd grade up to 8th, this book will prove handy. Through the authors' extensive travel and journaling, they have given a great gift to the many military (civilian) children following in their footsteps. In the book, both boys give their tween view on the day's sightseeing, as well as a trip recap from Mom. Unfortunately, there are no page numbers throughout the paperback copy of the book. When looking up a location in the table of contents, a page number is given for each location; however there are no page numbers throughout the book to find that certain page. Not too huge of a problem, as I can narrow down the area based on locations that came before or after. The content far outweighs this inconvenience, though. Overall, a very helpful addition to any travel collection, and will help our kids get excited for the upcoming move. Kudos to the young authors!

I really enjoyed this fascinating tale of two youths that chronicled their vast travels around the world. From the pottery shop next to the orange orchard to Noah's Ark to the Rhine Falls in Switzerland, the book was super! The details in their story being told and the pictures to highlight the different locations and vast historic cultures was very well done. After reading the Diary of a Traveling Kid, I am inspired to put a higher priority on traveling with my family and experiencing the unlimited cultures and history that the world has to offer. You will want to get this super book and ensure that you pass the word along that the Diary of a Traveling Kid is a must read!!!

fun to read - wish it did not end. I love reading the important (and corny) details. In the digital version, the weblinks are easily followed and provide valuable helps.

The Diary of a Traveling Kid is a travel diary with suggested itineraries from two American tweens, James and John, about their monthly international travel during their 3 years living in Germany! It was previously only available as an eBook due to clickable links for 265 places but is now available as a paperback! These military kids wrote all about what they saw, what they ate, how they felt, and what they did as Mom and Dad took them on a grand expedition to see all of Europe a little of Africa. - Read their accounts of 18 trips to 17 countries: Italy, France, Spain, The Netherlands, Belgium, Czech Republic, Gibraltar, Croatia, Slovenia, Greece, Switzerland, Austria, Poland, Portugal, Germany, Northern Cyprus, and Egypt! - Come with the traveling kids to their own box at the opera in Prague and take a ride with them on camels to the Sphinx in Egypt! - Learn travel tips on how you can skip the LONG lines at world famous monuments and destinations like Rome's Coliseum, Paris Eiffel Tower, Spain's Alhambra, and SO MUCH MORE! - Discover hidden gems off the beaten path - not featured in most travel guides! Did you know you can hire a sailboat to navigate the Greek islands with your own captain your family/friends as the crew? - Find great restaurants, campsites, hostels and hotels to accommodate ALL budgets with the included links at the end of each chapter! You too can spend the night in a medieval Spanish castle for the price of a regular 4 star hotel! The Traveling Kids escapades feature everything from almost freezing to death in a tent in the Julian Alps of Slovenia to the luxury of a cruise ship sailing the Mediterranean! Their voyages crisscross Europe and parts of Africa - from the Canary Islands to the Red Sea; from Poland to Portugal. Their editor, Mom, has also included her commentary and travel photos, as well as 265 internet links to all the places they visited, so YOU can recreate these travel adventures for yourself! Even if you're already on a trip, read this book, be INSPIRED, and start planning your next ADVENTURE!

About the Author
The authors James (14) and John O'Leary (12) are 2 American military children traveling the globe in response to the needs of the US government. From Washington, D.C. to Hawaii to Germany with residences scattered in between, the brothers are now living in their 7th home in Stuttgart, Germany. They currently attend German Gymnasium secondary public school in a suburb outside of Stuttgart, Germany. Snowboarding, track, German Football, reading, Minecraft and, of course travel, rank among their interests. Their writing coach and editor has been an avid writer on the internet for the last decade - her way of keeping connected with friends and family as the military has taken her all around the world.
