parent - you find you can only visit your usual haunts so many times before you're left feeling bored and wondering what you can do to "shake things up" a bit. Arranged alphabetically, the book includes family favorites such as zoos, museums, famous parks - but dives in deeper to provide more unique experiences for the whole family. ie: observation decks, grocery store tours, day trips and seasonal festivals. My family received the 8th edition as new parents, and we are now giving the 9th edition to new parents and families who are new to the area.0 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Good Journal for KidsBy Beverly Coynel bought two of these for my grandchildren's spring break trip to DC and future adventures. They are 6 and 10 and their mother thought it was a very good way to record their experiences and have a place to store their brochures and information they gathered on the trip.

This popular guide, thoroughly revised and updated, describes in detail a wealth of opportunities available to families and their children. It includes outings at parks, museums and shops throughout the Twin Cities metro area--complete with entry fees, opening and closing times, discount opportunities and more. This great guidebook also has a section on day trips to nearby attractions.
