Shara is amazing to live with such an adventurer. Not a dull moment. Bear describes his trip in such detail I could picture it like I was there too! Mel0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Excellent!By CKFascinating story. Really appreciate Bear's honesty and openness about his life and his faith in God.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. good for mostBy williamAnother book by a author, explorer, has own charity, does charity work, family man. Bear grylls does it all and this book is yet another testament to his writing. O my reason for 4 stars is because it was boring in parts.

This is the account of five British men in an open, rigid inflatable boat fighting for their lives in perhaps the most dangerous and unpredictable seas in the world. It started out as a carefully calculated attempt to complete the first unassisted crossing of the frozen north Atlantic in a rigid inflatable boat, but it became a terrifying battle against storm-force winds, crashing waves and icebergs as large as cathedrals. Starting from the remote north Canadian coastline, Grylls and his crew crossed the infamous Labrador Sea, pushed on through ice-strewn waters to Greenland and then found themselves isolated in a perfect storm 400 miles from Iceland.

"An epic story of hardship, friendship and faith' Daily Telegraph '[Grylls]' writing allows you to feel you are sitting alongside him on his adventure... I could taste the salt spray in every sentence and the bone numbing chill in every paragraph' Herald Express 'Grylls is certainly proof that the age of great explorers has not completely passed us by.' Scotsman" About the Author Bear Grylls spent three years with the British Special Forces. During this time he had a horrendous parachuting accident in southern Africa, breaking his back in three places. Three years later he overcame the odds to become one of the youngest British climbers ever to reach the summit of Mount Everest, and this story forms the basis for his bestselling memoir, Facing Up. Bear Grylls is one of the most successful motivational speakers on the world circuit.
