Walter W. Gowing : Fly With Me before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Fly With Me:

Fly With Me captures the wild and exciting stories of a journalist and his wife as they navigate all of the exotic and unusual corners of the globe. Making friends with a million penguins in Patagonia or roaming the range with gauchos on Brazil's Pampas, Walter Gowing manages to out do himself with every new stamp in his passport. He's been lost in the air on a disabled plane at night after the radar failed, escaped from a whispering glacier and topped it all off by riding on a racing ostrich in South Africa. Don't forget about the dignitaries whether it's finding his way into a welcoming line up for the Prime Minister of New Zealand, or the glamorous life of a Pan Am flight attendant and her encounter with President John F. Kennedy, Fly With Me has it all. Experience America's ghost towns, ride the rails of the Australian outback and evade pirates off the coast of Africa in the pages of this thrill-seeking memoir.

About the Author Standing his ground in front of a charging elephant, a close encounter with a ferocious lion or being attacked by a crazed monkey is all part of getting the story to this journalist and author of adventure. Walter Gowing and his wife Lillian have travelled to more than 100 countries around the globe and spent a total of one year at sea during a 10 year period, all in the name of finding exciting news and adventure stories for his readers. Although his weekly newspaper column in the Cambridge Times covers events and happenings in and around the community of Cambridge, Ontario, Canada, his books reach to far-off places in Asia, Africa and South America. The normally mild-mannered columnist becomes a risk taker when in the jungles of Africa or on the border of Yemen and Saudi Arabia. Gowing's life has been packed with excitement, danger and intrigue. For the author, sometimes the most rewarding experiences are the ones he doesn't need a passport for at home in Cambridge. His work in the community earned him numerous awards for community service.
