I bought it after watching Harry Hubbard's video of the Lazeria Map Collection on youtube, which i also recommend. I think maps will become things of much greater public interest over the next few years, particularly azimuthal equidistant maps, such as the UN map and the official USGS map. Why a flat earth map as the official map of the UN? Does a weather machine exists under the Earth? Does the North Pole lead to a vast underground civilization? What happened to the large, inhabited island of Friesland?Maps not only give us answers to our world, but raise many questions. Why to this day don't we have even one photo of the Earth from space, when satellites would really help in mapping?
