The book has some written commentary but is largely a collection of pictures of classic Ireland. Quality paper with lovely color printing. Great coffee table book that makes for a wonderful gift or a place in your own library. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. I was so disappointed with this book By Glorial I was disappointed with this book! There is not that many pictures of beautiful Irish houses in this book. There is a lot of discussion of history, but that was not what I was looking for. If you are wanting a history lesson on the different places in Ireland, then this just might be your book. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. A Delightful Close Look at the Heart of Ireland. By poet While I only had the opportunity to preview briefly this delightful and revealing look at the heart and soul of Ireland, it is being enjoyed by the receiver of this wonderful gift! I recommend it without reservation.

A visual trip through the Emerald Isle: an unparalleled portrayal of the rural beauty and charm of Ireland. Clusters of white cottages huddled between hills of an unbelievably rich green, villages of a single street, dazzling in their array of color washes and picturesque shop-fronts such are the villages of Ireland, which to this day are living working communities. The most beautiful of these villages are captured here in Christopher Fitz-Simons sensitive commentaries and Hugh Palmers evocative photographs. This is a journey full of rural gems, some famous, others less so. Here are the colored coastal villages of Cork, their vibrant houses sloping down to a sea that so many Irish people crossed to found other communities in America. Here too are the stunning medieval churches of Roscommon and Galway; and the villages of Antrim, standing ruggedly in defiance of the northern seas. 285 full-color photographs

Quaint, charming and predictably green. . . . The pages echo with tranquility in this composite masterfully photographed by Hugh Palmer. -- Veranda, Deborah Merck Sanders, December 2000
